A - Read the following text adapted from "The hound of the Baskervilles"

.....

"May I read to you some old papers that can help you to understand this case?" asked Dr. Mortimer.

"Please do, Dr. Mortimer", said Holmes

A hundred years ago, the head of the Baskerville family was Sir Hugo Baskerville. He was a wild and evil man. Sir Hugo fell in love with the daughter of a farmer who lived near his lands. The young woman was afraid of the evil Sir Hugo and avoids him.

One day Hugo heard that her father and brothers were away and that she would be alone. So he rode to the farm with a group of his evil friends. They kidnapped the girl and took her to Baskerville Hall. She was locked into a room upstairs while they sat down in the dining room to drink. As usual they drank bottle after bottle and soon they began to sin and laugh and shout evil words.

The girl upstairs was so frightened that she did a very brave thing. She opened the window, climbed out of the room and down the ivy on the wall. Then she started to run across the moor towards her house.

Sometime later Sir Hugo went upstairs and found out she had run away. He was so mad that he decided to chase her with his hounds and even screamed that he would give himself to the devil if he could caught her before she reached home. Sir Hugo's friends followed him, riding over the moor with the hounds running around them.

After a mile or two they found an old farmer and asked him if he had seen Sir Hugo and the hounds. The old man looked very frightened and told them: "I have seen Sir Hugo and his hounds but behind Sir Hugo I saw a huge and terrible hound, like a hound of hell, running silently after him.

The men laugh but a few miles away they stop laughing and looked very frightened when they saw Sir Hugo's horse running back towards them without a rider. Even the dogs looked frightened. The riders were afraid too but three of them were brave enough to go down into the valley.

The valley had a wide flat floor. In the middle of the ground there were two big stones and ~~for~~ in the middle of them was the girl, dead of fear and exhaustion. Near the girl was lying Sir Hugo's body and over him was a huge black creature that looked like a hound with his teeth at his throat. As they were looking the hound tore Sir Hugo's throat and then turned towards them with his eyes burning brightly and with blood running from his mouth. The men screamed and rode back as quickly as they could.

"That was the first time the hound appeared, but it has been seen many other times since then and many of the Baskervilles have died in strange and terrible ways." Dr. Mortimer concluded.
